- (c) section 162 is not limited by section 163 in relation to an infringement notice for which the registrar is the administering authority.
- (2) In relation to an infringement notice or infringement notice offence for which the registrar is the administering authority—
 - (a) this Act applies to the registrar, in the capacity of registrar and in the capacity of administering authority, with all necessary changes; and
 - (b) without limiting paragraph (a)—
 - (i) a provision requiring an administering authority to give a thing to SPER or the registrar does not apply to the registrar as an administering authority; and

Example—

Section 28(2)(c) requires an administering authority to give to SPER a copy of a notice withdrawing an infringement notice.

If the registrar withdraws an infringement notice for which the registrar is the administering authority, the registrar is not required under section 28(2)(c) to give a copy of the withdrawal notice to SPER.

- (ii) if a provision provides for an administering authority to give a thing to SPER or the registrar for a purpose, the registrar may take action under this Act as if the thing had been given under the provision; and

Example—

Section 28(2)(c) requires an administering authority to give to SPER a copy of a notice withdrawing an infringement notice.

If the registrar withdraws an infringement notice for which the registrar is the administering authority, the registrar may take action under section 29 as if a copy of

- (iii) a provision requiring the registrar to notify an administering authority does not apply to the registrar as an administering authority.

Example—

Section 57(4)(a) requires the registrar to refer the matter of an offence to the administering authority in particular circumstances. If the registrar is the administering authority for an offence, section 57(4)(a) does not apply.
