In Queensland it is obvious when one surveys the damage done to a large amount of land that the savage land clearing which occurred particularly since the Bjelke Petersen time has had a dreadful effect on both the flora and fauna of these areas.

Much has probably had to be done to grow grain crops, and farmers now are realising that if that was done in the past with good intentions, then it must be rectified by planting new trees in big stands to help both their pasture, and the animals that live in their habitat., and to keep the water that used to nurture their paddocks.

It is not too late to save many hectares of land from this indiscriminate clearing. Please use your influence to save our land., and those that inhabit it.

Yours very sincerely.....Petra and John Jones.
