Submitter Comments:

Why are we targeting law abiding gun ownership, and mandating more rules regulations and red tape that doesn't contribute to safety and security for the community. Instead of targeting individuals that already comply with complicated and overly regulated systems that don't stop criminals from accessing firearms illegally. You should be putting more effort into preventing criminal from in acquiring unregistered and illegally obtained weapons. These weapons generally have never been registered or kept by a legal firearm owner. The real issue is not to punish those that do the right thing by applying more complication and red tape to there everyday lives, and should be about stopping criminal activities and black-market acquisition of weapons. Licensed firearm owners are not criminals, and need to be given a fair go by governments as law abiding contributing members of the community.
