Dear Mr Miles,

It has come to my attention that your government has proposed to introduce a bill that, among other things, could strip firearms licences from those with family members who break the law, or whose comments are deemed anti-social on social media platform. This is tantamount to punishment by proxy and has no place in a liberal democracy. Furthermore, who decides what is or isn't an anti-social comment on social media? This sounds horribly similar to the proposed Misinformation Bill whereby the government of the day become the sole arbiters of truth.

I am vehemently opposed to this bill. I can't believe you would propose such a Draconian bill this close to an election. It's a big NO from me.

Peter Campbell
