I am opposed to yet another extension of emergency powers in QLD. The virus is endemic now, and we are living with it just fine. It is time to move on from the fear-mongering and continued government interference. Government actions taken to “slow the spread” have resulted in untold harm to our economy and to the mental health of thousands. These emergency powers were only ever meant to be a very short-term thing. The government has had over two years to implement action plans. I believe the government is simply reluctant to relinquish power which they ought not to have. It’s time for them to back off and let us get on with our lives.

Cara Marshall
