I Kris Friend, of 6 [REDACTED] QLD categorically do not support the extension of emergency powers to continue supporting a government segregation policy, namely mandates regarding vaccination status determining employability, that marginalises a section of our community based on data that is ambiguous.

- Recent Australian Bureau of Statistics data highlights 92% of those COVID deaths were with people that have at least 3 underlying serious medical conditions, leaving 2,639 deaths purely from COVID, since its arrival. That categorises COVID deaths in the less than 1% category over the past 22 months.
- Plenty of data suggests that the vaccines and booster efficacy is minimal and short lived.
- Recently policy was amended to allow unvaccinated parents into schools, students are also allowed in school unvaccinated and so they should be. Therefore, it makes no sense at all those teachers whom are unvaccinated should also not be able to continue in their profession.
