To whom it may concern

I am writing to record my objection to the government's proposed extension to the emergency bill to October 2022.

There is no longer any need for the state government to treat our state as being in an emergency from the COVID 19 virus. The perceived threat of a swamped hospital system with bodies stacked in hallways is no longer imminent.

In the recent outbreak around Christmas time, the numbers of infections were nowhere near the estimated cases.

It is also time to end the vaccination mandates. The evidence from the recent outbreak shows that vaccination does not prevent you from catching or spreading covid. The continued insistence that unvaccinated people pose a greater threat to the community and should be prevented from entering certain venues is cruel and divisive and only serves to increase mental health problems in our community.

I'm sure unvaccinated individuals have been welcomed in the recent flood rescue efforts in Brisbane / no need to be triple vaccinated for that...

Please do not pass the extension of the emergency bill in Queensland.

Yours sincerely

Vicki Woolston
