

From: Janice Richardson
To: Community Support and Services Committee
Subject: Stop the Emergency Powers.
Date: Friday, 4 March 2022 11:22:51 AM

Good morning,

My name is Janice Richardson

[REDACTED]
[REDACTED]
[REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

I am a registered nurse currently employed by Queensland Health. I have worked as a nurse for over 36 years, serving the public without prejudice or discrimination.

In November 2021 I reserved my right not to have the mandated "experimental vaccine". Since then I feel like I have been shunned from society, made to feel like an outcast, deprived of my freedoms, facing losing my career (my only source of income), lost the freedom to see my family overseas, my freedom to go to the cinemas, see live theatre, go to restaurants....the list goes on and on.

We are now into the 3rd year of the "pandemic" with no light at the end of the tunnel. We now know that the jab causes lifelong, irreversible damage and, in fact, death.

The Government world-wide has used propaganda tactics, enticing fear, panic, emotional trauma and coercion to execute the mandates of these jabs.

The UK have now withdrawn all mandates for health workers. They have acknowledged the findings of many medical professionals. Surely it is time for Australia to do the same?

There is absolutely no need to extend the emergency order. There is no emergency - I don't believe there ever was. Not for a virus with a 99.7% survival rate anyway.

The emergency, in my opinion health-wise, now is that regular citizens do not have access to normal services as they should. Surgeries are being cancelled and postponed - people who have already been waiting far too long, as the health service was already in crisis way before Covid-19 was even heard of. Nurses over-worked and under-paid has just been the norm for many, many years.

The mandates for all need to be revoked and people need to be given their jobs and careers back. It is now well known that you can still catch and transmit the virus, even if you are fully vaccinated. Vaccinations have historically been about protecting yourself, not about protecting others. We need to get back to that mind-set and let the majority of society, including our kids get back to some sort of normality.

I appreciate your hard work in challenging the decisions of the poorly thought-out plans of the current leadership.

The current flood situation is a great example of Australians all working together, regardless of vaccination status to help the common cause.

Thank you for your time in reading this,

Janice Richardson.