Currently I do not feel I am suffering from elder abuse,although 2 years ago my eldest son was quite verbally abusive in text conversations and emails, at a time when I was in hospital recovering from surgery. The hospital actually kept me in longer to make sure I was emotionally well enough to deal with the situation when I got home, and I sought out an excellent psychologist to help me deal with things. At the moment my husband and I tend just to be careful in our conversations with him. On solicitors advice we Also changed our wills so that although he is still included in decision making, he no longer has sole authority
