I believe the Bill looks to improve on many real issues that many student, parent and teachers face when processing students in and out of the public school life. I have one issue and that is that the last section off the Bill wishes to add something that is just not necessary under the modernise and improve education services by: removing the use of gendered language and acknowledging wellbeing, inclusion and diversity. Removing the use of gendered language: As i understand this section to represent the removal of male and female language from the school environment. This should not be be a division made for the whole we allow people to identify as they wish and respect them for those differences. If we remove the choice to decide where does that leave us?
Acknowledging wellbeing, inclusion and diversity: These sorts of discussions have been made over and over again, schools don't need more Inclusion and Diversity they need more Support staff to allow student to grow and not be pushed down by the pressures to accept people and just leave them to learn. The sort of inclusion needed is the inclusion of support staff for the kids with ADHD and Mental struggles lets make more concessions for them and not the individuals who want to be accepted for who they believe they are. For context my son has the best teacher who is putting so much time to make sure hi ADHD is kept under control but she has no support in tat classroom with 7 kids with mental struggles. we need to support the great teachers and stop harping on about Inclusion and Diversity.
