A vast majority of homeschooling families choose to remove their children from what they reasonably consider is a broken education system. Gender fluidity is a modern concept that functionally is a pseudo scientific agenda. The unfortunate truth is that modern gender confusion/fluidity and its promotion amongst children in the school system is being done so with no long term basis for outcomes. The reality is, gender disphoria leads to worse outcomes over the long term. The eroding of the traditional male/female family structure has removed the foundational understanding for children to grasp that their biology does indeed make them either male or female. The minority may experience swings to one side or another on an emotional level through their childhood years or in development but majority, if not coached into gender transition programs etc will simply grow out of it and move forward. Notwithstanding, Government in their continued overreach of power want to adjust approved home schooling to insist on the removal of gender specific language. This is an almighty assumption that this worldview is indeed the correct worldview. According to who?! The latest social media influencer or pop star giving their political 2c? What rationale basis is made for the removal of gender specifics in the curriculum other than pandering to the ever increasing wants and needs of the offended 'inclusion' advocates?! Soon we will be including people who pretend to be animals as a topic of 'inclusion'. Whatever shred of credibility the Queensland Government had is quickly being eroded by these consistent demonstrations of poor judgement and overreach. Please reconsider the speed at which you are pursuing radical gender theories under the false pretext of inclusivity and progress. Regards
