Subject: Homeschooling Success and Real-World Preparation: A Parent's Perspective

Dear [Committee Members],

I am writing to share my firsthand experience as a homeschooling parent and to emphasize the invaluable learning opportunities that homeschooling has provided for my children. In light of the proposed changes to homeschooling legislation, I believe it's crucial to highlight the positive impact that homeschooling has had on my children's love for learning and their preparation for the real world.

Since embarking on our homeschooling journey, I have witnessed a remarkable transformation in my children's attitude towards education and she has not been exposed to the bullying which is festering in our public Queensland schools. My daughters have been subjected to bullying, not a positive productive learning environment which in hand has caused anxiety, learning difficulties as they dont want to attend school because of the fear of being exposed by teachers having to explain their difficulties caused by other children.

The personalized learning approach we have adopted has reignited their passion for learning and instilled in them a newfound confidence in their abilities. Rather than merely memorizing facts and figures, they are actively engaged in exploring topics that spark their curiosity and pursuing knowledge in a way that resonates with them personally and they are pursuing there found love for the future.

It is worth noting that, upon initially examining the current Queensland curriculum, we found that it did not align with our educational philosophy. Within just two weeks of attempting to follow it, we realized that the high-quality learning experiences we could provide at home far surpassed what was being offered within the confines of a traditional curriculum.

Through homeschooling, my children are not only acquiring academic knowledge but also developing essential life skills and values that are essential for success in the real world and this is very much seen how much they are growing compared to other kids when they get together on the weekend.

They are learning how to think critically, communicate effectively, and adapt to new situations—all skills that will serve them well beyond the confines of a classroom.

Moreover, homeschooling allows my children to actively participate in the world around them, gaining practical experience and insight that simply cannot be replicated in a traditional school setting. Whether it's volunteering in the community, pursuing hobbies and interests, or engaging in real-world projects, they are actively preparing for the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead.

In conclusion, I urge the committee to recognize and celebrate the diverse benefits of homeschooling, which go beyond mere academic achievement. As a homeschooling parent, I am deeply grateful for the opportunity to nurture my children's love of learning and to prepare them for the complexities of the real world through personalized, holistic education.

Thank you for considering my perspective.

Sincerely,
