Hi, this is [REDACTED]. I'm 7 years old. I don't think this is a good idea because I don't want to go to mainstream school. I like staying at home with my family doing school work. I probably learn just as much at home. I do subtraction, addition, and times tables. I look at stars with my telescope and I draw what I've seen in my book. I sometimes read by myself. I've seen the International Space Station at night. I know how rocks are made. I know what galaxies are made out of and what stars are made out of. I know what nebulas are made out of. I know a little bit about cars. I got to homeschool meetups and get to meet and play with other children. Please respond to this.
