Hello, I object to the proposed changes to home-schooling in Queensland. Some reasons are that home-schooling kids get to follow their own interests and growth without having to measure up to the curriculum. We as parents get to facilitate our kids learning and tailor it to suit them and their individual needs. Home-schooling allows kids to be kids, have the freedom to play and enjoy the outdoors, attend meet-ups and spend quality time with their families, it gives them the best chance at knowing what is best for themselves rather than what is taught to them straight out of the curriculum. If this change goes through it will completely shatter the home-schooling community who feel so strongly about the way we educate and support our kids in the best interest of their selves and their individual needs. The reason we home-school is to keep them out of school and away from the curriculum.
