It is our freedom to homeschool our own way. We already have a reporting system that is the most rigorous in the country, my key concerns are

- We don't want the Australian National Curriculum in our legislation. (Other states manage just fine without it listed in their legislation. Adding this to legislation means we can be taken to court if the national curriculum doesn't suit our kids...)
- We don't want to be forced to report and show 'educational progress' in every subject area
- we don't want HEU to be able to request reporting for times when we are NOT registered.
- we don't want the implication that we need to prove homeschooling is in our child's best interest.
