Homeschooling is a very rewarding form of education, and has helped my children immensely some of whom have Special Needs. It takes pressure off the system. It gives parents the rights they should have regarding the information their children receive. The current education system is alarming to parents with the Left-leaning theology and false teaching that has been introduced. Especially regarding the sexes. There are only two! The current system works well the Homeschool education unit does really a good job, no further complications are required for parents as it is hard enough as it is for them to homeschool their children, incur all the costs and then troll through loads of paperwork to satisfy the government Who should have no business in our lives anyway apart from working for us. I and my fellow men demand that no further burden is put up upon parents in regards to this important matter. That burden would be an invasion of our parental rights. I have finished my homeschooling and I wish for every young person to have the privileges my children have had, and for the young parents to be able to experience the joys that come from teaching your own children. The whole of society would be a better place.
