I oppose the proposed changes to homeschooling in Queensland due to the following reasons: 1. The use of a single curriculum restricts our learning potential. There are numerous valuable curriculums available, as well as learning from life itself, and it would be narrow-minded to limit ourselves to just one. Additionally, individuals have unique learning styles and needs, so a one-size-fits-all approach may not be suitable for everyone. 2. These changes infringe upon the rights of parents to make informed decisions about their child's education. Parents should have the autonomy to choose the most appropriate method of education for their own child, as they are the ones who know their child best. 3. The majority of the material covered in the Australian curriculum lacks practical application in our daily lives. In fact, much of the information that I was taught in school has been forgotten over time. This proposed changes raises concerns about government control, but I firmly believe that the truth will always prevail.
