

Education (General Provisions) and Other Legislation Amendment Bill 2024

Submission No: 1139
Submitted by: Darren Jones
Publication: Making the submission and your name public

Attachments:

Submitter Comments:

Parents should have the freedom to select a curriculum tailored to their child's needs. The National Curriculum is formulated for mass classroom settings, lacking suitability for individualised instruction. The existing registration and reporting framework functions effectively; alterations seem unnecessary. Rather than imposing further regulations on homeschooling families, governmental focus should shift towards evaluating the education system to address the escalating student attrition rates.