Submitter Comments:

I have young pre school grandchildren living in our home age 3 & 5 years old. They are both on the NDIS as they both have several behavioural issues and are currently under therapy. Their parents have decided that they will homeschool them both to help the children through their most vulnerable years. This is a basic right for all parents to decide how their children will be best educated particularly those with special needs. Parents should be able to choose a curriculum that works for their child, The National Curriculum is designed for large classrooms of children, not for a personalised teaching environment. Instead of making things more prescriptive for homeschooling families, perhaps the Government should review the school system and find out why so many students are leaving it.
