Submitter Comments:

I believe all children and parents need to have the freedom to choose the type of education they experience. This needs to be offered without any interference from a governing body who is insisting on certain restrictions or requirements that are too difficult to follow. I have met many wonderful humans who have been part of the homeschooling community and I have never seen a need to have further requirements for their education. I do not accept the offer of changes to the schooling curriculum in any way unless it is to be less constricted. It has come to my attention that the proposed changes primarily focus on mandating adherence to a standardised curriculum without delving into the underlying reasons why many families choose homeschooling in the first place. This approach fails to address the core issues at hand and risks further alienating homeschooling families from the educational system. It's crucial to acknowledge that homeschooling is often chosen by families for a variety of reasons, including dissatisfaction with the traditional schooling system, concerns about safety and bullying, religious or philosophical beliefs, or a desire for more personalised and flexible learning experiences tailored to individual student needs. Rather than imposing stricter regulations, I urge the committee to prioritise understanding and addressing the root causes of homeschooling trends. This entails listening to and considering the feedback from homeschooling parents, who are directly impacted by these legislative changes. Their insights and experiences are invaluable in shaping effective policies that support the diverse needs of families while ensuring the well-being and educational success of children. In conclusion, I respectfully urge the committee to reconsider the proposed changes to homeschooling legislation and to engage in a collaborative dialogue with homeschooling stakeholders to identify and address the real issues driving this educational choice. By doing so, we can work towards a more inclusive and responsive educational system that respects the choices and concerns of all families.
