Parents should be able to choose a curriculum that suits their child's individual needs. Mainstream schools have a 'one size fits all' curriculum regardless of a child's intricate requirements of learning. We are all individuals and learn at a different speed, level and style. Some of us have an artistic creative way of learning, or see ways differently to solving problems. Children find it stressful when being pushed in the classroom to learn ways they struggle with, causing withdrawal, then leading to possible mental health issues.
