Dear Committee Members, I am writing this letter because of the changes you want to make for homeschoolers. I feel annoyed because homeschoolers like myself and others shouldn't be bossed around about what school work to do. We each are on different learning levels, even if we are the same age and we can't be expected to all complete the same amount of work, because we're all different. I used to do distant education and I hated it because I had to keep up with the work that was really difficult for me. It was also annoying that I had to do school work that was boring, for instance, HPE. I was asked to do activities like balancing on one leg for 20 seconds, when I already knew how to do it. I am happier with how I am now homeschooled. My parents have chosen my curriculum. I like how I don't have pressure with completing things in a certain time. It means I can spend more time doing my work well and not rushing it. The work I am doing now doesn't make me feel angry. Please do not change the way we homeschool. I hope you listen to my advice. Sincerely, Another Happy Homeschooler
