Submitter Comments:

The wellbeing and safety of a child should always be the parents responsibility unless deemed by the high court that an individual parent is unfit to make such decisions. We are not live stock and should not be treated as such. Parents should be able to choose a curriculum that works for their childThe National Curriculum is designed for large classrooms of children, not for a personalised teaching environment catering to a Childs individual needs, interests and strengths. Also large classrooms have failed at teaching common sense on the basics of life requirements. The current registration and reporting system are working well, there is no need to change it. Instead of making things more prescriptive for homeschooling families, perhaps the Government should review the school system and find out why so many students are leaving it. Homeschooling teaches children to be humans and the basic's on how to live in an ever changing world and have strong mental health skills to fall back on when life is demanding.
