To the Committee,

I am writing in response to the proposed changes to current homeschooling requirements in Queensland. I ask you to allow the homeschooling community to continue educating their children the way they are.

I am a small business owner and currently employ two homeschooling students in my café. These employees are friendly, hard-working and well-adjusted young people who are an asset to my business and valued members of the team. I don't know what curriculums they are following but I can see they are well educated, intelligent and active members of society.

Because the hours of my café are predominantly school hours, I have limited opportunity to employ students who attend mainstream school. My employees are available at times other students are not because of the flexibility of their homeschool schedule. It is financially beneficial for my small business to have the opportunity to employ school students and I am passionate about training them and equipping them to step into further roles of responsibility.

Please do not place added requirements and pressure to follow the Australian curriculum on homeschooling students. I have witnessed firsthand the success of home education in these families and hope to continue seeing them flourish in the home education environments they are currently enjoying.

I am happy for you to publish my submission on the website but please withhold my name.

Regards,
