It is my will that you do not change the current legislation on homeschooling in QLD.
We parents should be able to choose a curriculum that works for our children.

The National Curriculum is designed for large classrooms of children, not for a personalized teaching environment which is what I plan for children.

I would like my children to have critical thinking skills, not be sheep led to the slaughter from the current indoctrination regime you call education.

The current registration and reporting system are working well, there is no need to change it.

Why do you think home school registrations have increased by 300% in the last 5 years?
