Submitter Comments:

I've spent the past weeks spending all my energy on meeting my 2 children's needs. This has tapped me dry. However I feel it's vitally important to find a few more spoons to respond to this disaster of a bill before you.

I objects to the inclusion of a guiding principle which removes my power as a mother to make the best choices for my (ND/Disabled) child. No one knows what my child needs better than me.

I objects to the inclusion of the National curriculum as the definition of a high quality learning. The National curriculum is not a suitable substitute for the carefully created, individualised education my child currently receives and needs to thrive.
