To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to express my objection to further extending the expiring provisions. Despite stuff ups in hotel quarantine, border protection, contact tracing and many other areas, we are still yet to see significant outbreak of cases of this so called super-spread, highly-contagious virus and also yet to see any casualties at rates more significant than the yearly flu. If people are worried about COVID, get vaccinated, self-isolate, wear masks, take your own precautions but stop taking away our freedom to live a simple happy life under the guise of doing what is best for everyone. It is time to get back to life as normal and live with whatever consequences that may have.
