Please please please look at Singapore's model. They 'live', not exist in fear.

Our 'cure' seems to be deadlier than the virus and makes no sense to put people at that extra risk for no added benefit. Like all viruses, this one will mutate and mutate so the vaccine will no longer be effective anyhow. Let our bodies work as they should, and develop our own immunity.

As influenza seems to have disappeared due to increased hygiene, maybe that's where the focus now needs to be ... increased hygiene. And motivate people to stay at home when they are sick.

Poor mental health due to lockdowns, will be your next issue to deal with. And actually should be addressed now, not later. Is Queensland Health prepared for this? I can tell you that Queensland Health already don't handle mental health well, and will be completely out of their depth as the full effects of lockdowns and fear hit.

Regards,

Lesley Joyce Mitchell
