To the Relevant Parliamentarians

Many times I have been in agreement with the Labor Party regarding humanitarian issues. Generally I consider the Labor Party to be more ethical than the LNP

In this case I consider the Labor Party to be willing to aid the abuse of the very least powerful. The abuse of women, of children by the stronger and more powerful is generally socially condemned. We condemn the sentiment of people in power harming the the vulnerable just 'because they can'.

It is claimed the unborn is part of the mother's body and it is her choice what she does with it. It is indispensable that the mother nourishes the unborn but it is indisputable that it is not her body. It is an unborn with a distinct DNA.

When the law protects the strong and more powerful at the expense of the vulnerable and powerless, protections ceases to have meaning. Terminating the life of unborn following the abuse of the woman does not make the abuse anymore acceptable, although it removes the evidence of the abuse at the expense of the most innocent victim.

Life should not be viewed as expendable because it is inconvenient. Potential should be allowed the unborn as well as the mother.

Termination of life on the unborn should not be considered by a society that wants to choose lawful protection of society as a whole.
