Dear Representative committee

The questions that need answering before even considering legislation are:

When does life start?

If at birth why do many people, especially women, grieve if they lose a “foetus” before full term?

Do these people who may not be adequately programmed persons need to be reprogrammed or even lobotomised so that they have a correct and acceptable perception of what life is and what its’ worth is?

Is convenience more important than life?

If so, do we have a similar solution to: autism and any and all other defects, unemployment, pensions the public purse cannot afford, overpopulation and perhaps people that don’t understand the omniscience of government?

Please conscionably returning detailed answers stating both your views and the philosophy behind them.

Respectfully yours

Cris Geri
