Good morning,

I am writing this note opposing the Queensland Labour Governments Bill on Abortion, submitted by Jackie Trad.

Twice the past couple of years Bill's have been voted down in Parliament opposing abortion and yet now as a State we face this time and money wasting issue again. The people of Queensland whom the Government are supposed to serve do not want abortion legalised, under any circumstances. If the people who have voted in the politicians and allow the party system to operate say no, to whom are the politicians answering to, being advised by?

Government authority is meant to be a 'servant'. A servant serves under the authority of another.

The purpose of a governing authority is to punish evil and approve good.

Sir William Blackstone, the great English Common Lawyer describes law as 'rule of right conduct.'

Here we have the simple organising principle for Government.

The Abortion Bill being tabled before you is evil, the only way forward in this situation is to approve good.

This means more counselling made available to pregnant females, through a doctor not an abortion clinic.

More hope offered in what the pregnant woman perceives as a hopeless situation.

Australian men and women need to be held accountable and responsible for their own sexuality and our Governing systems need to stop offering the quick fix of murdering innocent babies for which the Queensland tax payer are required to pay for something we detest. This is wicked Governance.

Jennifer Moore
