To Whom it May Concern

While I agree that we as women have a right to decide on issues that relate to our bodies, I do NOT agree that legalising abortion is one of them.

I do agree that there could be medical reasons for aborting an unborn baby in the early stages of development, legalising it in general is not the way to go.

While it isn't yet proven, there is a possibility that clinically aborting unborn babies at any time of gestation could lead to developing breast cancer later in life.

Does the government really want to take the risk of increasing the likelihood of this happening?

Not to mention that killing of humans is a crime, and in my opinion, a foetus that has a heartbeat from very early on in development IS human.

Shame on you Queensland Govt if you pass this Bill.

Sincerely

Sandra McAuley
