

From:
To: abortionlawreform
Subject: Stop the slaughter.
Date: Monday, 27 June 2016 3:16:26 PM

To whom it may concern.

I would like to raise serious concern to the fact that it is considered ok to kill an unborn baby, yet all effort is made to save the life of an unborn elephant. When did animal life become more sacred than human life? I would like to state that everyone have the choice of contraception, but killing human life is not contraception, it is murder. To leave a baby who is alive outside to die, because the abortion was unsuccessful, is neglect of human life of that of a live baby outside of the womb. Since when is it ok to kill humans? Let alone those who can't defend themselves? What happened to morals of a country if that is considered ok?

I am ashamed of the selfishness of people in this country and the disgusting attitude to helpless babies in a modern society. May your conscious convict you to think not of self, but that no one has the right to murder an individual for personal satisfaction that lasts a minute or two. All other mistakes and lack of judgement gets met with the consequences of the law and punishment. What makes this any different?

I hope you take this seriously, as I had to speak up for those who can't.

Regards

Paul Victor

Sent from my iPhone