To Whom It May Concern

I understand that there have always been and always will be abortions, but that is a different matter to state-sponsored abortion as is presently being proposed in Queensland.

State-sponsored abortion is now so widespread, so entrenched in the First World, that it has decimated natural population growth to the extent that there are few countries that do not now have negative population growth. Such is the desperation of many of the countries of Europe to reverse their dwindling populations that, in recent times, they have allowed millions of illegal immigrants to flood their territories, in spite of the huge economic and social problems this has generated.

We in the West are sowing the seeds of our own destruction, and anyone who thinks that state-sponsored abortion is the answer to this, in any way, shape or form, is delusional. Once the killing of the unborn is legalised in Queensland, which is what is being proposed, there will be no stopping it or its consequences.

Sooner or later:

- Your children will kill you because you permitted the killing of their brothers and sisters.
- Your children will kill you because they do not want to support you in your old age.
- Your children will kill you for your property and your money.
- If a doctor takes money to kill an innocent in the womb s/he will kill you with a needle when paid to do so by your children.

Australia must "populate or perish" as the catch-cry was back in the 1950s. This means again offering young men and women considerable social and financial incentives to produce children:

- Generous financial rewards for producing and providing ongoing care and support for their offspring.
- Assistance to purchase or rent family accommodation.
- Help in meeting childcare, pre-school and education expenses.

Many of our near neighbours do not show this trend towards negative population growth. Quite the opposite in fact. And, as time goes by, they will more and more enviously eye-off our under-used land and resources.

I say again that we must populate or perish.
