Re: Submission on the Leislative Bill to ammend the Nature Conservation Act of 1992.

I am concerned that a change as planned in a Legislative Bill to Ammend The Conservation Act of 1992, which is before the relevant Parliamentary Committee will threaten the biodiversity of our National Parks by opening them up to development and commercial activity.

These areas are too precious to our biodiversity and indeed to our own survival to allow them to be opened up to development.

Increased use by humans will not only have a degrading effect on roads and walking tracks, but also allow the introduction of weed and feral animal species, to the detriment of our precious native species.

My daughters, grandchildren and great grandchildren deserve an opportunity to enjoy our natural spaces

Please reconsider this Bill
