To Whom It May Concern

I am writing to you to register my interest in the Outdoor advertising inquiry.

My belief is that the Government must act to remove sexually explicit, and often implicit, material from public places. The reasons are many, and I'm sure you have as many emails as you can read.

We must ask ourselves, is this what Brisbane, indeed Queensland has become? Advertisements for strip clubs and the like, publicly displayed, so that a parent has no option on whether or not their family views such things. I feel many people are simply caving into the politically correct spirit of this age, and are afraid to say we don't want this.

People who wish to find strip clubs will find them. They don't need explicit outdoor advertising. There are other advertising mediums which these groups can use. Brisbane is not America, Canada or Europe. I feel that Governments and most definitely the media have vastly underestimated the amount of conservatives in Australia. We can live quite happily without this type of advertising in public.

If someone does actually read this email, thank you for doing so. I for one am grateful for good governance, and believe this country has a bright future, should it remember its roots and history.
