To whom it may concern,

I am writing to voice my concern about the nature of some advertising content that is displayed in public places. Some billboards contain sexually explicit images which are not appropriate to be on display for children to see. I am concerned that advertising standards are no longer interested in protecting young eyes & minds but merely looking for attention grabbing images at the cost of our young ones. Please consider changing standards so we can keep advertising "G" rated for the sake of the next generation.

Yours Sincerely

Rebecca Jones
