I am writing to advise my disgust and deep concern at so much of the outdoor advertising on huge billboards that is forced upon us (especially our children) these days. When will we be able to travel our highways without being confronted by lewd images? It may be true that people have freedom to see what they choose, but by displaying inappropriate images publicly, the freedom of multitudes of other people is immediately compromised. I believe it is unfair that we have to view these. New billboards appear out of the blue eg the new strip joint billboard across from Enoggera Army Barracks. Also, visiting the Theme Parks always means passing numerous offensive billboards. Can we please make any public advertising G-rated? With such interactions in the media lately in the political sphere about acknowledging the value of women, I am actually surprised that such demeaning of women is approved. Instead women should be honoured and esteemed.
