Subject: Outdoor advertising of Strip Club near Enogerra Barracks

To Whom It May Concern,

I understand that a billboard advertising the services of a strip club has been erected (no pun intended) across the road from the Enogerra Army Barracks.

While I respect the right of businesses to advertise their businesses, I absolutely object to “Adult” businesses spruiking their businesses in the public eye. This sort of public advertising interferes with the right of adults and children who do not want to see this material. It is anathema to me and many like me and I do not see why I should be forced to view material of a sexualised nature. Nor do I believe that forcing impressionable children to view this material is good for them – thanks to billboards of this ilk, we are at risk of raising a generation who think that women are nothing more than sex toys for men.

What can we do to have this highly offensive billboard removed?

I look forward to your response to this matter.

Yours sincerely,

Nicola Saad
