Life should be treated as sacred, protected by law and Parliament Legislation, especially the most vulnerable the unborn and in this case, an aborted baby who has survived an horrific abortion. As a country we must respect life and turn away from a death culture, especially towards our most vulnerable. You have the power to provide life over a death sentence. Before making your judgement remember the Commandment "Thou Shalt Not Kill" Instead of sentencing these babies to death Parliament should protect them and ensure they are given the opportunities life can provide by improving the adoption processes.

If the Parliament fails to pass this Legislation innocent children who battled to survive the horrors of an abortion will be put to death by the Parliament without any criminal conviction and totally innocent. I urge and pray that the committee not wash your hands of saving the lives of innocent and defenceless babies by allowing the Parliament to condemn these innocents to death, but rather recommend that Parliament pass this Legislation so that these babies might be given the chance to experience life, like you and I.

My name is [REDACTED] and am a retired Australian Army veteran. Babies born alive after a failed abortion are no longer fetuses inside a mother's womb. Once born they are enabled to be treated like any other child after a normal birth.

Sincerely, [REDACTED]
