Public Submission by Peter Jones.

If the government fails to intervene, then those responsible are in the situation of failing to provide the necessities of life. It is like turning away a dying patient from a hospital. The committee must pass this legislation for the good of our society, for humanity and morality. Let's not be like the Romans.

My name is Peter Jones from Redlands Coast, a retired teacher. 2000 years ago the Romans used to leave their unwanted children out on hills and fields to die. Christians would collect and adopt them so they remained alive. It seems society has gone backwards to letting unwanted children die. Those born from abortions should be collected and provided with health care and allowed to be adopted. Otherwise why are we disgusted to find a child who dies when a parent fails to provide the necessities of life?

Only the government can intervene in the toxic environment to force the abortion clinics to provide healthcare to babies born alive. It is not in their interests to do so otherwise.

Sincerely, Peter Jones
