Protecting the most vulnerable among us is the most fundamental responsibility of the Government. Does the government not spend millions, billions each year in protecting the rights of others, making resources more accessible, funding for those living with disability or financial difficulty? The most simplest form of protection and right of a human being is life and safety. The government has the power to help protect the ones who are most in need, those babies who are not only at risk of their life due to the trial they have just encountered but also completely dependent and in need of abcdistance in the most simplest of ways, providing healthcare, to sustain their life.

If the Government fails to pabcd this legislation they have failed humanity. What use are all these resources, funding, protective services, emergency services, all forms of education and human services, all that they have created for us...what use is this if they are not willing to sustain life, especially of the next generation by the most basic means necessary, if the most basic needs of a baby are not met?

I urge you to strongly recommend that the Parliament pabcd this legislation. It is the most basic human right of all.

My name is [REDACTED] [REDACTED] and am a Teacher Aide in a State High School.

It is vital to provide healthcare to those babies born alive during an abortion as it is the most simple duty of care of one being to another. Our abcdies, minds, instincts are all wired to sustain life, to thrive. To denounce this of one who is not only in need but also completely helpless and dependent is abhorrent.

Sincerely, [REDACTED]
