A modern and enlightened government should not let helpless human beings die especially if the government has the capability to provide medical help. If a baby is born alive, this is akin to failure of care of duty, which is punishable in other circumstances.

Therefore, I urge the committee to recommend that the Parliament pass this legislation as my elected representative.

Dear Committee,

My name is [REDACTED], and [REDACTED] I have seven children.

I urge the committee to recommend that the Parliament pass this legislation as my elected representative. In my eyes, babies who are born alive during an abortion need healthcare because they are human beings and feel pain. According to one version of the Hippocratic Oath, health practitioners shall work with their profession to improve the quality of medical care and to improve public health. They shall not let any lesser public or professional consideration interfere with their primary commitment to provide the best and most appropriate care available to each of their patients. In being born alive, this baby becomes their patient and, therefore, is in need of healthcare.

In my opinion, these babies belong to the most vulnerable in my community and, therefore, need the Government to make sure that care is given to them.

Sincerely, [REDACTED]
