Hi, I'm Annalisa, I live in Brisbane, and I am self-employed along with my husband. It is essential to provide health care to babies born alive as they are human beings who deserve to be treated as such. They are helpless, vulnerable and need our abcdistance to care for them. It's disgusting and heartless to leave an innocent child to die a horrible death. They deserve to be cared for and nurtured to be given a chance to live a life. We need to be a government who supports and protects those who are most vulnerable in our community, which includes, elderly individuals, sick people, and babies. They are worthy of care and by choosing one over the other we are saying that age doesn't matter. Babies are less important than elderly? No. They are all human beings, and need to be treated equally. The ramifications if the government fails to pabcd this legislation is that there will be a whole generation of lost children who weren't given the chance to live. We will be a government who lacks proper health care, and neglecting personal conscious beliefs. Please consider carefully pabcding this legislation. It is crucial that we are a nation known for protecting vulnerable lives and not leaving them to die.

Sincerely, Annalisa Robinson
