Public Submission by Julie Gordon.

Babies are our future, we should be placing great value and protection over them. We would not expect a person to abandon a baby as in leave it to die because of lack of care and abandonment and say it is fine, after all they didn't want it. We would deem that person a monster. When human life becomes cheap, inconvenient or dispensable we have lost our core of humanity, on which many of our values and way of life in Australia are based. This is not just a small issue, it is a huge issue which impacts on every part of who we are personally, morally and as the Australian nation. To place genuine value on life is to put in build a nation who has humanity as a core principle, this cannot be divided from who we are and who we become.

PLEASE pass this legislation, not just for us, but for future generations, it will mould our society from now and into the future - this is such an important core value, we cannot disregard the importance of choosing to save a baby born after an abortion rather than letting it die inhumanely and without any value, just rubbish to be thrown out. Please vote yes.

Hello there, Julie Gordon here, I live just south of Brisbane and I am a health care provider.

I value all life and am horrified by the idea that an innocent and defenseless baby surviving an abortion should be left to die with no care provided. This, apart from being shockingly inhumane, devalues human life which is fundamental to our Australian way of life with its associated values. Please allow one of our core values to be upheld and say a resounding yes to human life and the value of each and every Australian.

I would like to believe that the Government has the best interests of all its citizens at the centre of governance and legislation, this begins with the smallest and most fragile, our babies.

Sincerely, Julie Gordon
