A baby born alive during an abortion is a human being. In the very same hospital, there will be medical professionals fighting to save the lives of newborn babies
The fact that babies born alive during abortions are unwanted, does not change the fact that they are human. Governments are in place to care for, and provide justice, for their consabcdueents. This includes the most vulnerable- babies born alive during abortions . To exclude any human being from the most basic of care is to dehumanise us as a society. Failure to provide justice for one group influences a societal mindset which will, if not halted, have ramifications for other groups. As Martin Luther King said: "Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere. We are caught in an inescapable network of mutuality, tied in a single garment of destiny. Whatever affects one directly, affects all indirectly."
I urge members of Parliament to be faithful to their role and ensure justice for all members of our society, and make sure that babies born alive after abortions are provided with the care they themselves would like their own children, grandchildren or they themselves to receive were they in the same situation.
