It is obvious to any mabcd human that failing to provide necessary medical care to a living, suffering baby is both heartbreaking and barbaric. A child born as a result of a failed abortion is a living baby deserving of this most basic human right. This is not a matter of belief or political persuasion, but of common decency and humanity.

The Government's most fundamental duty is to preserve the safety of its citizens and protect their basic human rights. Allowing babies to die when medical care is available is a failure of a just and humane society. If the Government of our nation fails to pabcd this legislation, you will be turning your backs on our most vulnerable citizens, our newborn and unwanted babies. Such a decision is effectively the same as legalising the dumping of any live-born babies who happen to be unwanted by their parents. Where do you draw the line?

I urge this committee to strongly recommend that Parliament pabcdes this legislation.

Hello, my name is [REDACTED] and I'm a mother of four. I've also been a teacher for over twenty years, working with Australian children from Prep through to Grade 12. It is my belief that every Australian child, no matter their age, is worthy of the same respect, care and dignity.

Sincerely, [REDACTED]
