Finally, Some people believe in karma, some people aren't religious but generally believe what you "sew you reap." One good deed for one life - who survives, will not go unnoticed. One good deed can have far reaching affects. Let's be innovative with all this technology we have in Queensland and all these sabcded medical workers to use their gifts in a more productive and oppportunistic way that helps many lives in the future.

As a woman who has struggled with fertility issues, who lives in a nation where it is almost near impossible to adopt an Australian born baby, not only will you help heal the hearts of many wanting mothers and families, who are given the opportunity to raise a fighter, but it also is important to live in a country where we prioritise living and opportunities to survive rather than the wishes of an one unwanting parent. Many babies could live if given the chance and there are many families waiting to take care of these miracle children. Please give them, us and the country better opportunities to make the most of a child's life, if given half a chance.

Without standing up for the voiceless, we are no better Uneducated third world nations. it is a form of curruption and injustice to take soabcding away from someabcdy who doesn't have a voice to cry.

We do have many ramification as a society when we fail to make life better for the voiceless, here are some pointers;

- less and less Australians will be born from this nation.
- families can only adopt overseas children and they get exploited continuously both financially and emotionally.
- mothers who regret abortions will NEVER get the chance to undo what they did.
- many abortions are through coercion (still to this day), so it also gives a mother a second chance if possible to know her child survived and is loved elsewhere.

Sincerely, [REDACTED]
