Compassionate care for people at the end of life should include the option of assisted dying. There is little or no dignity or quality of life in living beyond the time you can exercise a level of independent thought and action.

There is so much suffering when death is inevitable but no option exists to end it at a time and place of your own choice. We can do better for the people we care about if this legislation exists to provide those who want to make a choice the capacity to do so.
