Submitter Comments:

Person MUST have a terminal illness with no chance of recovery, be of sound mind and capable of making the decision his/herself to Die with Dignity, before being offered any drugs to end life. This can be done before their terminal illness gets to an untenable stage and before he/she becomes unable to make the decision his/herself.

Two separate doctors to agree that the process is in the best interests of the person, ie. Their death would be a long drawn out, painful experience for them otherwise.
